UNABLE TO NEGOTIATE.

From The Chicago Tribune. "You've taken up all of my time you're going to," said the woman at the kitchen door, wrathfully. "I've told you I don't want any pins, towels, soap, lead pencils, stove blacking, combs, or tin spoons. I'll give you just ten seconds to get away from here!"

I'll give you just ten seconds to get away from here!"

"That reminds me, ma'am," said the pedler, opening his package again, "that I've got a little arrangement here for the accurate measurement of time, so you don't have to guess at it. It's generally used in boiling ergs, and consists, as you see, of a little glass filled at one end with sand, which by simply inverting runs slowly through the wasp-waist in the centre down to the other end, registering accurately each and every time you use it and allowing about three minutes and twenty seconds for the boiling of an eag, which, as you know, is about the proper time if the water is holling when the erg is put in, unless you want the erg boiled hard, and every authority on wholesome diet will tell you, madam that hard-boiled segs are unwholesome, causing indigestion and sometimes redness of the nose, for which there is no cosmetic that will."

By active exertions he managed to reach the corner of the kitchen and get around it before the dipperful of boiling water got there.

AN ALBINO TROUT. From Forest and Stream.

While fishing for trout on May 2 I caught an Albino trout, if it be not a variety of that fish. E. T. Hoffman has recently stocked the upper waters of Dingman's Creek, and it has occurred to me that the fish might be a new variety; and yet I know nothing of a white trout.

I was "poking around" among the sticks and alders, when to my astonishment I caught sight of a white fish—hooked. It was not over five inches long, and as I saw it white as it came up I said. "This is a shiner or a silverfish." But, I thought, "This is a shiner or a silverfish." But, I thought, "Thave never seen, in my experience of many years, anything but chubs and occasionally a small pickerel." However, as the line swung into my hands I was surprised to see a white fish, and as I extended the paim I said, "No scales here; and the form of a trout is perfect." I looked closely as it lay on my hand. It was white, with outlines of the mottlings of the back. I could not see the red spots, while the yellow ones seemed whiter, if possible, than the spots of the sides. Of course the fins and tail were even clearer and whiter than the body. Of course I released the fish as soon as I could. It was gasping for water, and I saw it must perish soon. It was a vigorous one for so small a fish, and it dove down lively enough among the submerged alders. Maybe it will be found again.
